

Attempt To Bomb Edgely House Unsuccessful

GREAT PROGRESS
MADE ON GREEN
LANE UNDERPASS

Big Engineering Feat, With Many Large Problems Solved

WORK BEING RUSHED
Underpinning of Tracks Was One of The Main Items

Great progress is being made in the building of the underpass which is to carry vehicular and pedestrian traffic under the six tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Green Lane. Work is being pushed forward with great vigor by the H. F. Curtis Company of New York. With the completion of the underpass a new avenue of travel will open extending from North Radcliffe street at its intersection with Green Lane through to Beaver Dam Road.

The railroad's right of way here is six tracks wide, and all six tracks must be underpinned as the work of excavation progresses. Traffic over this busy railroad highway must not in any way be interfered with or slowed up. Express trains of twelve and thirteen cars, traveling at high rates of speed, pass over the line at very frequent intervals.

The underpass and roadway leading to it will be 50 feet wide from house line to house line, and 28 feet wide from curb line to curb line. There will be 11-foot side-walks on both sides. The overhead clearance will be 15 feet, which is one foot greater than any other underpass constructed up to this time. The additional depth was made necessary so as to provide a tree and unobstructed passageway for the Keystone airplanes being towed from the Keystone factory along the Delaware River to the company's landing field. It is now necessary for the Keystone company to tow all of its planes along the main highway leading through Bristol, and out Beaver street to the field. At the intersection of Beaver and Garden streets, where the Pennsylvania Railroad's elevated line crosses the thoroughfare, there is not sufficient clearance for the planes, and it is necessary to remove the wheels and "skid" the planes underneath the elevated structure, and then remount them upon the wheels for towing to the field.

The excavation work for the underpass is being pushed from both east and west sides of the track, and good progress is being made. It is expected that the job will be completed in the fall.

A large concrete sewer to drain the surface water has been laid from the underpass along Green Lane to the Delaware River.

SCHEDULE FINAL SESSION

The Junior Travel Club will hold its final meeting of the season on Tuesday evening, at the home of Miss Anna Hawkes, of Edgely, including a picnic supper.

SHOOTS MAN WHO TRIED TO BEFRIEND HIS WIFE
FOLLOWING BITTER QUARREL AT PERKASIE HOME

PERKASIE, May 28.—A man residing near this borough is in the clutches of the law after having shot the man who befriended his wife. The defendant is Lawrence Gilbert, recently established near Perkaspie, after moving to the North Penn from York. He is alleged to have fired a shot gun out an upstairs window of his new home upon John H. George, of York, the pellets hitting him about the face, one striking close to his left eye. The hearing, before Magistrate Mahlon Keller, of Perkaspie, was one of the most stormy, complicated, and protected that has ever been held in his office. It was put on in three "acts," morning, afternoon and evening, before the family and inter-family charges and counter-charges could be successfully straightened out. The trouble began, it was testified by Mrs. Clara Gilbert, wife of the defendant, when she and her husband

SPEED IS WATCHWORD AS BIG
THIRD PERIOD IN COURIER'S
GIFT CAMPAIGN NEARS CLOSE

Monday Night Sees End of Big Votes and Special Prize

The all-important third period closes Monday night at 10 o'clock. These next three days present the last opportunity for securing big votes. Monday night is "Opportunity Night." The entire campaign closes forever and all the big prizes will be distributed one week from Saturday night—June 6th. This is the home stretch in the race for the big prizes.

With but two more days in which to turn in subscriptions and secure the greatest number of votes for each subscription, interest in the competition and enthusiasm in the progress of candidates in The Courier's gold election is growing by leaps and bounds.

Each candidate in the race realizes that the grand prizes—representing thousands of dollars in actual cash—are practically within their reach, to be claimed for their own or forfeited to more aggressive opponents during the next few hours, depending almost upon their final supreme efforts put forth while the big votes are allowed.

If you are one of those folks who have decided to obtain a big bag of gold in the gift distribution, it is a safe bet that your first thought today was: How many votes am I going to

REPORT STATES PICCARD,

Stratosphere Balloon Descends After 30 Hours In the Heavens

MESSAGES ARE MEAGRE

INNSBRUCK, Austria, May 28.—(INS)—A daring attempt to penetrate the mysteries of the skies, ten miles above the surface of the earth ended today when the "stratosphere" balloon of Professor Auguste Piccard, a Swiss physicist, descended on the Jurgler Ferner Glazier over the Austria-Italian frontier after 30 hours of wandering over central Europe.

First reports from the searching parties failed to answer the main question—whether Professor Piccard and his assistant, Charles Kipfer, had survived their 30 hours of aerial exploration in the hermetically sealed ball.

An unconfirmed report said the men were "unconscious" indicating they were still alive, but this had not been confirmed several hours after the balloon descended.

INNSBRUCK, Austria, May 28.—(INS)—After thirty hours of wandering through the skies, the stratosphere balloon in which Professor Auguste Piccard and Charles Kipfer attempted to climb ten miles above the surface of the earth came to rest today on a high mountain peak in the Italian Tyrol, according to reports received at the Innsbruck airport.

The reports declared the huge balloon, with its two occupants imprisoned in a hermetically sealed aluminum gondola, descended on the Jurgler Ferner mountain peak in the Oetz Valley at 9 a. m. (4 a. m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time.) The fate of the daring air explorers was not immediately known.

get and how can I increase my lead this week? And you are absolutely right. Now is the time to cut loose; this is the time to hurl yourself into the fray, before Monday night, June 1st, and if you are a real worker you can land one of the big prizes. These final hours should see candidates hustling as they never have before. Every one of them should realize that the value of the four biggest prizes at stake runs into thousands of dollars, and the next awards after the big bags of gold are very substantial sums of cash, good old coin of the realm. Think of it! Think what it means. It is entirely possible for any of the leading candidates in the list to get enough votes by 10 o'clock Monday night to "cinch" their choice of the big gifts.

Leaders Bunched

With the principal contenders so closely bunched, the leading candidates realize that these big prizes are within their grasp. They know that no one has a great advantage, that the matter is entirely in the hands of each individual. The big bags of gold will go to those who make the best showing from now on. There is no doubt of that. "From now on" means mostly Saturday and Monday the last two working days of this all important period. There will, of course, be an opportunity during the last week and candidates will make the most of it, but this period offers the two-fold opportunity of securing your winning votes by the assistance of the biggest remaining vote schedule and at the same time piling up enough points in new subscriptions to win that big cash prize of $300 to be awarded at the close of the campaign, and on which points will cease Monday night.

DRIVES ON BOARDWALK

By "The Stroller"

Three popular young men of Bristol had quite an experience on Sunday. They drove to Atlantic City in an Austin and when one had the idea that perhaps it would be quite novel to drive on the boardwalk, the others agreed. Up went the car and rode for a square or two on the famous wooden way.

The trio got away with it once. Not satisfied they tried it a second time and were caught. The three were placed under arrest and fined $50. A former Bristol resident now a member of the Atlantic City police force came to the rescue and aided the Bristol trio.

FINE OF $400 AND COSTS
IMPOSED ON CROYDONITE

Prison Sentence is Also Given In Case of Samuel Henry

CURRY IS ACQUITTED

DOYLESTOWN, May 28.—"You are not the big man in this case, but the Court does not believe your story and is tired of being bothered with people like you," said Judge Hiram H. Keller before imposing sentence on Samuel Henry, forty-five, of Croydon, who pleaded guilty to charges of the possession and manufacture of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes.

Henry, formerly of Philadelphia, was sentenced to pay a fine of $400 and the costs and undergo a prison sentence of not less than three months nor more than one year in the county jail.

He was arrested on June 13, 1930, when Officers Christ and Francis raided his farm on the Bustleton pike near Feasterville. He told the officers he had just "run off a batch."

Harry C. Christ, a member of the State Police force, testified that he found a fifty gallon still, 3100 gallons of mash, and 63 barrels of alleged beer in Henry's residence.

He also stated that the still was not more than a hundred feet away from the highway and he was not able to detect any alcoholic fumes.

The defendant, Henry, who had been a groom at the riding academy of the Four Horsemen in Philadelphia, testified that he never knew his co-partner's name nor his boss, and did not know who furnished his bonds. He had, it was learned, been ordered to appear in court on three previous sessions. (Continued on Page 4)

State Police Investigating—Suspicion Centers About Yellow
Roadster With Rumble Seat Which Passed Property
Several Times—Bad Aim Saves House
From Being Damaged

EDGELY, May 28.—An unsuccessful attempt was made shortly before midnight to bomb the residence of John Firman, 12 Woodside avenue, Headley Manor. The bomb exploded in the front yard, ripping branches from a tree and tearing a hole about five inches in diameter in the ground. Pieces of metal were scattered about the yard, and houses in the neighborhood were jarred.

Three of Firman's sons are employed at the Blue Moon Hosiery Mill, Croydon. One is a shipper, and two are knitters. State Police from Morrisville were called and are making an investigation. Suspicion centers about a light yellow roadster with a rumble seat.

Mrs. Firman and one of her children were sitting at an upstairs window when they had their attention attracted by an automobile which passed the house a number of times. The lights on the machine were out. It is thought that three persons were riding in the rumble seat. The last time the machine passed the Firman residence there was a flickering flame noticeable in the rumble seat, which is believed to have been caused by the occupants igniting the fuse of the bomb, and then they were seen to toss an object into the front yard as the car sped away.

ON GETTING ALONG

Every community has its members who can not get along with their fellow citizens. Many offices, stores and factories have persons on the staff who are incompatible with their fellow workers. Every man and woman knows somebody he or she "can't bear."

No two persons are alike, and every nation and race has traits peculiar to itself. Sometimes the point of disagreement is opinion, such as religious, race or national prejudice. Between individuals attitude, habits, personality and tastes may be the cause for dislike. Sometimes people disgust others and often they even anger their fellows. Women are said to be even more prone to take personal dislikes to others than are men, but among men there is often heard the remark, "if it wasn't for the law."

But this is a large world and one person has no more right to it than another. Since it is no longer feasible to lead the life of a recluse or hermit or to retire to the recesses of a monk's monastic cell, people must learn to conquer their dislikes and aversions. It isn't easy and it isn't pleasant, but it is frequently necessary. Workmen have been successful in abolishing many undesirable working conditions, but they have never evolved a sure method of ridding themselves of undesirable working companions.

People make life easier and sweeter for themselves by seeing the one good trait in the person who has a dozen bad traits.

WOMEN IN NEW FIELDS

Woman, being sister to man, may be open to criticism for many things, but those persons do her injustice who would discount her efforts to attain proficiency in certain fields that have hitherto been pre-empted by her brother on the score of "cheapening" imitation.

Before woman's "emancipation" many activities were limited to the male sex, not because it was peculiarly and specially equipped for them, but because man-made custom so decreed. Now that the barriers are lifting, women should be free to enter any fields that appeal to them. The fact that such fields have hitherto been special preserves of man is immaterial. If woman can enter them and win out, she will have earned her position—and in such case it would not lie in the mouth of any man to criticize her.

Woman and man are subject to different limitations. But many lines of activity invite competition, and it is permissible for woman to "imitate" man in following them. Woman's entrance in a number of fields has been delayed by restrictions imposed by man, and the fact that the latter was in first does not give him the right to exclusive possession, now that such barriers have been removed.

Many a young man who asks for a girl's hand deserves the father's foot.

A gasoline shortage is predicted for the year 2000. By that time, however, the cars will be so thick that they can't move anyhow, so it really doesn't matter.

CHAPTER I.

MARY LOU THURSTON, walking along Shore Road on a bright Autumn morning, gazed wistfully across the Narrows and at Quarantine, where a great ocean liner had just come to anchor. The water was sparkling blue and the sky was a great arch of azure. Fussy little tugs plodded along, a sea breeze swept bright color into Mary Lou's round cheeks, an airplane droned overhead importantly.

"Mary Lou!"
Mary Lou tugged her giddy little beret over one eye and turned to behold her young cousin and charge, Billy Sanderson, leaping up and down on his 6-year-old legs, pinioned to earth only by the string of the red paper kite he held in his fat hand.

"What is it, Billy?"
"Jever go up in an airplane, Mary Lou? What makes airplanes stay up? Kin I go up in an airplane, Mary Lou?" inquired Billy, all on a breath.

"No," said Mary Lou, regretfully, "no, Billy, I've never been up in an airplane. They stay up because—" Here Mary Lou, floundering in the sea of her own scanty knowledge, ended firmly, "because of the engine..."

"Autos have engines... they stay down," remarked Billy, helpfully.

"Look," cried Mary Lou, "at the big boat."
While Billy looked and his 20-year-old cousin sighed with relief, the airplane vanished into the horizon, and Billy began formulating other questions, relative to boats, in his busy mind.

Mary Lou sat down on a green and white bench where the drive curved to a wide look-out, topped by a flagpole circled with red Autumn flowers.

"Stay right here, Billy Sanderson," she commanded, an anxious eye on the cars sweeping up and down the road.

A Dreamer.

While Billy clambered over the seats and fell into the flower bed, clutching his kite, Mary Lou looked off over the water and dreamed.

She was always dreaming. She was round and delectable pretty and vital. She had red-gold hair and eyes as blue as the water flowing past the sea wall. She had a pert nose and a sweet, gallant, red mouth and the most charming hands and feet in the world. Also, she was slender where slenderness is demanded and curved where curves are necessary for beauty. Small as a wraith charm, lively as a cricket, fresh as a budding rose and dreaming as a May night... sitting on a green and white bench on Brooklyn's Shore Road—once known as Millionaires' Row—looking at a static ocean liner and wishing herself in Persia or Peru, Afghanistan, India, England—

Not that Mary Lou was unhappy. She was too healthy for unhappiness, too sweet for discontent. But she was as vitally restless as a puppy tugging at his leash. And she was a dreamer born, a weaver of enchanting fairy tales and legends, with the innocent egotism of youth. She read herself into the pages of the heroine of every play she went to. She was always imagining herself in the most amazing, the most enchanting situations.

The side streets off Shore Road are a hodge-podge of architectural "periods"—Civil War and General Grant, Tweed Ring and strictly "modernistic." Rows of red brick houses, each the twin of its neighbor, run along only to be brought up short by a great, sprawling, bay-windowed frame house, built for space and comfort, sitting back in its own flower garden with perhaps a little vegetable patch added. Now and then, among more pretentious pseudo-Spanish dwellings of cement and stucco and almost-wrought-iron balconies, one sees a small frame dwelling of an earlier day, white painted, green shuttered, demure and lovely.

In such a house Mary Lou Thurston lived with her young aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson, and their extremely lively youngster, Billy. Mary Lou Thurston was that fast vanishing American, the "home" girl. Once she had had the most charming and delightful parents imaginable, young and careless, happy hearted and improvident. Her father had been a painter—not a very good painter, but a very happy one.

On a tiny income he and his beautiful young wife and Mary Lou had traveled almost all over the world. Then they had come home and there had been an epidemic and presently there was only Mary Lou left to remember. So, at 15, she had come to live with her mother's brother and his wife. And as Billy was a baby and as Mrs. Sanderson had wished to continue with her excellent "job" as secretary to a publisher, Mary Lou had fitted in, a valuable addition to the little household.

While Billy fell into the flower bed clutching his kite, Mary Lou looked over the water and dreamed.

It was Mary Lou who looked after Billy, who kept the little white and green house as shining as a new pin, who wandered along Third Avenue with a basket on her arm, remembering the Italian of her childhood, to the delight of the fruiterers, laughing with them, asking politely after the health of their families, pinching lettuce heads, weighing oranges and doing a shrewd bit of bargaining. It was Mary Lou who learned to cook, to put Billy's spinach through a sieve, to provide the Sanderson family with tested recipes from the magazines and to wean them away from cans and delicatessen.

Little Mother.

So the youthful Sandersons went forth to work and Mary Lou stayed at home with Billy.

Billy was going to school now, proud as Punch, and Mary Lou had a little more time to herself. But today was Saturday and she and Billy were indulging in their daily airing along the drive. Rain, sleet or snow, Billy was bundled up and trotted out for his exercise, like a little racehorse. And he certainly responded to it, being fat, but not too fat, and rosy and almost bursting with energy.

Of course, life wasn't all Billy and spinach, gas stoves and dust mops. Mary Lou had her Sundays and she was free many evenings. Generally, however, she was to be found with her cunning nose stuck in a book. She had many friends of her own age and sex. All the girls she knew went to business and although she saw them occasionally they seemed somehow to live in another world. Her best friend—But at this juncture he arrived, a slim, spare young man with a freckled face and hair much redder than her own.

"Hello, Mary Lou—hello, Billy—gosh, what a tummy! You'll eat yourself into the grave, my lad. Look out... over you'll go and the kite with you."

A Real Pal.

Larry Mitchell, 26, very inquiring reporter on the Daily Star, plucked Billy from the back of a bench and set him down, tweaked Mary Lou's beret completely over that bright eye and sat himself beside her.

"What, no greetings?" he inquired.

"Of course. What are you doing here this time of day?" asked Mary Lou severely, but her eyes danced. She was very glad to see him. "She always was."

"Looking for a murder," was his morbid reply. "Sent over here to scarp up a little news. Isn't any. Thought I'd find you here."

Mary Lou had known Larry for three of the five years she had lived with the Sandersons. She had seen him on an average of four times a week ever since. For Larry, dashing out of the Middle Western town which had given him birth to challenge New York with his enthusiasm, his vitality and his typewriter—to say nothing of his insatiable curiosity—was much education. Oh, not her book learning—she had enough of that—too much, he thought privately—come at in odd and devious ways—but her education in practical sophistication. He thought her too much the dreamer for this world. He took her on many little jaunts, expensive and innocently gay. They went evenings to funny little Italian places in New York and now and then, when Larry was very "flush," they danced on the Bossert roof of a fine Summer evening. He came daytimes, too, to walk along the sea wall with Mary Lou and Billy, to sit in Fort Hamilton park, and on Autumn Sundays they sometimes went to a polo game at the Fort itself. They went to motion pictures and they went to theaters, the latter excursions generally due to tickets given Larry by the dramatic editor of his paper. They sat on the Sanderson porch when the nights were clear, or on rainy evenings, inside in the living room, doing crossword puzzles, solving bookish murders, squabbling and laughing like a couple of youngsters.

McLARNIN SCORES DECISION OVER PETROLLE

(By Les Conklin)
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, May 28.—Eighteen thousand boxing fans who fed $82,000 to the turnstiles at Madison Square Garden last night to see Jimmy McLarnin score a ten-round decision over Billy Petrolle, were talking today about a new McLarnin.

The McLarnin who gave the Fargo Italian a boxing lesson in seven of the ten rounds last night, winning the unanimous decision of the referee and judges, was not the McLarnin who gained the title of "Irish Knockout King" by dropping one man after another with his deadly right. He was the McLarnin who was known as a master boxer on the Pacific Coast before he went right-hand crazy.

Last November Petrolle ducked under Jimmy's roundhouse rights and peppered the Vancouver Irishman with left hooks, giving him the drubbing of his life. Two days ago McLarnin said he would get in close this time and carry the fight to his opponent, but he did nothing of the kind. Instead he stood at long range and cuffed Billy repeatedly with light lefts, throwing the Fargo Express off balance and preventing him from getting in close. He rarely threw his right, crossing it only occasionally to remind Petrolle that there was dynamite in it.

The first two rounds, which were slower than a funeral procession, went to Petrolle. McLarnin, absent from the ring for the past six months, was wild and unable to find the range. Billy landed enough left hooks to take the edge.

In the second round Jimmy felt a twinge in his bad right hand when he raked Petrolle's skull with a right, and his trainer told him to concentrate on his left hand. He followed instructions so well that Billy thereafter was able to win only one round, the seventh.

There was no steam behind Jimmy's lefts but they annoyed Billy no end. He simply could not get in close, although he forced all the fighting, and every now and then the smiling Celt would bounce a sizzling right off his bridgework.

Jimmy drew the claret from Billy's nose in the third round. Although not seriously hurt, Petrolle was drooling blood for the remainder of the fight.

There were several wild melees, but most of the time Jimmy stood like a wooden soldier and everlastingly poked his left to Billy's head. Petrolle, trying desperately for a knock-out, rushed McLarnin around the ring in the last round but ran into a barrage of short, jolting rights and lefts.

After the fight, Petrolle revealed he had been weakened by an attack of influenza three weeks ago, information which would have been much more timely twenty-four hours ago. He weighed 138 pounds, McLarnin having a four-pound advantage.

McLarnin was a 9 to 5 favorite. Jimmy is now in line for an outdoor title match with young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion. Tom McArdle, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, is to confer tonight with Ray Alvis, Thompson's manager, regarding the match. McArdle still wants to pit Petrolle against Tony Canzoneri, the light-weight champion.

Last night's bout drew a net of $79,184.98, the largest here this year.

Companion, Unconscious

both men had been rescued alive but unconscious.

Searching parties of Italian carabinieri had been scouring the valley for hours on motorcycles in an effort to locate the air explorers.

The Gurgier Ferner peak is 15,000 feet high. The balloon had been drifting at just about this altitude throughout the night.

Searching parties, according to the official version received by airport authorities, sighted the balloon lying on the glacier. There apparently was no sign of life, and the port-holes of the aluminum gondola were closed, the report said.

As they battled their way toward the spot, searchers strained their eyes for some movement, feeling that if alive Professor Piccard and Kipfer first of all would attempt to free themselves from the metal craft in which they imprisoned themselves at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, twenty-five minutes before the take-off from Augsburg, Germany.

No encouraging sign rewarded them. The balloon and its aluminum appendage lay still, guide wires flapping slightly in the wind. The occupants, who sought to place a greater distance between themselves and the earth than any other men in history, were either dead or unconscious inside the gondola.

sions and in explanation of his delinquency said that he did not have money to make the necessary phone calls informing the Court of his delay. Upon the motion of District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn that a juror be withdrawn in the case of Rose London, who is charged with the transportation and possession of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes, the Court ordered a juror withdrawn and the case continued until the next term of criminal court.

Charles J. Curry, proprietor of the Neshaminy Hotel on the Lackawanna Trail in Warrington township, who last December was sent to prison and fined for a violation of the liquor laws, was acquitted in criminal court of a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes at his hotel, but the jury directed that he pay the costs.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer, in sentencing Curry to pay the costs, warned him that he had better not get back into court again on a liquor charge for he might not get away so easily. Judge Boyer said that he had no fault to find with the verdict in this case.

Mrs. Anna Bilker, of South Langhorne, was foreman of the jury that tried Curry. One other woman and ten men served on the same jury. Webster S. Achey, of Doylestown, defense counsel, in addressing the jury, stressed the point that the Commonwealth in his opinion had failed to show whether the very small portion of beer seized for testing purposes was beer that was "fit" for beverage purposes.

State Police from Morrisville and Doylestown raided the Neshaminy Hotel on April 4 this year. They found a quantity of beer in a half-barrel in the basement of the hotel. The keg was not connected to any coils and had been dumped over so that part of the beer had run out on the floor. A half-barrel on tap was found to be "near beer."

at the farm, testified that he was attracted by the shouting and quarreling, and arrived in time to see George fall on the ground, apparently attempting to dodge the shot.

The shooting resulted in Constable Frank Benner, and Officer Harvey Wampole, of Perkaskie, rounding up the entire party, and placing them under arrest. Among those arrested was E. C. Dice, another farmer from the neighborhood, who went to see what the fight was about.

Constable Benner pressed charges against all, holding the hearing throughout the afternoon. It was evening and a supper recess had been called, before it was decided that the holding of Gilbert would be sufficient, and the easiest way out of the trouble. Mrs. Gilbert is being held in $200 bail as a material witness against her husband, a very unusual legal procedure.

"Stepping" Parents--- And Evils of Youth

It's Time That "Partying" Older Folks Called a Halt, Writes Winifred Black, and Gave Thought to This Problem of Our Young People.

By WINIFRED BLACK

MORE—and more—and more—every day—every single, terrifying, heart-breaking day.

Murder, violence, assault, cruelty, and in every one of these hideous stories of the news—a boy under 20 and a girl under 18.

Not the children of the slums either—mark that.

Boys from good, decent, respectable families, girls whose fathers are lawyers, doctors and business men in good standing.

The last two horrors come from the college campus—think of it, the colleges where we send our boys to learn to be "gentlemen" save the mark!

What's it all about, this reign of terror, and this saturnalia of vice? Bootleg liquor has a lot to do with it—of course.

Real whiskey and real gin were always had enough for young, inexperienced people.

Before prohibition, girls of sixteen didn't drink gin, and they never thought of tasting whiskey.

And boys of eighteen didn't carry flasks.

But there's something deeper than that, back of this complete breakdown of the old-fashioned sentiment about decent women.

In your mother's day a man who would speak evilly of an honest woman was courting a good thrashing at the hands of even the toughest barroom loser.

Those were the days when men took off their hats at the mention of a good woman's name, and any girl of modesty and self-respect could call upon the protection of any decent stranger and be sure to get it. That's all changed now.

Older men still seem to have some old-fashioned respect for women—but the boys, the young fellows, the spenders, and the gay blades of today—poof!

What's a woman's good name to them?

Nothing—and less than nothing. Isn't it about time for some of the older generation to stop "stepping" and mixing highballs for a minute or so, and think a few honest, serious thoughts about the whole outrageous, horrifying situation?

We've all known always that there were dregs in the bottom of the cup of life, some of us have waded in these dregs ourselves by force of one circumstance or another.

But Youth, beautiful, clear-eyed, clean-hearted Youth—we've always tried to protect that. What have we done to the world, we oldsters? And what are we permitting the youngsters to do with life right now?

Were we a little too clever, and a little too "scientific," and a little too modern, when we insisted on tearing the veil from the intimacies of life?

Were we too eager to tell everything, discuss everything—did we give to young and immature minds material which they could not possibly digest and has it been that which has helped to madden them?

Sex—sex—sex—we've talked it, and preached it, and sung about it, until a man from Mars would think there was no such thing in life as hard work, and good rest, and hunger, and thirst, and food and drink, and simple natural joys, and sorrows—nothing but sex.

How can we blame the youngsters for going crazy in such a world of blatant bawling from the house tops? It takes, they say, a young eaglet a long time before his youthful eyes can stare at the sun without a blink.

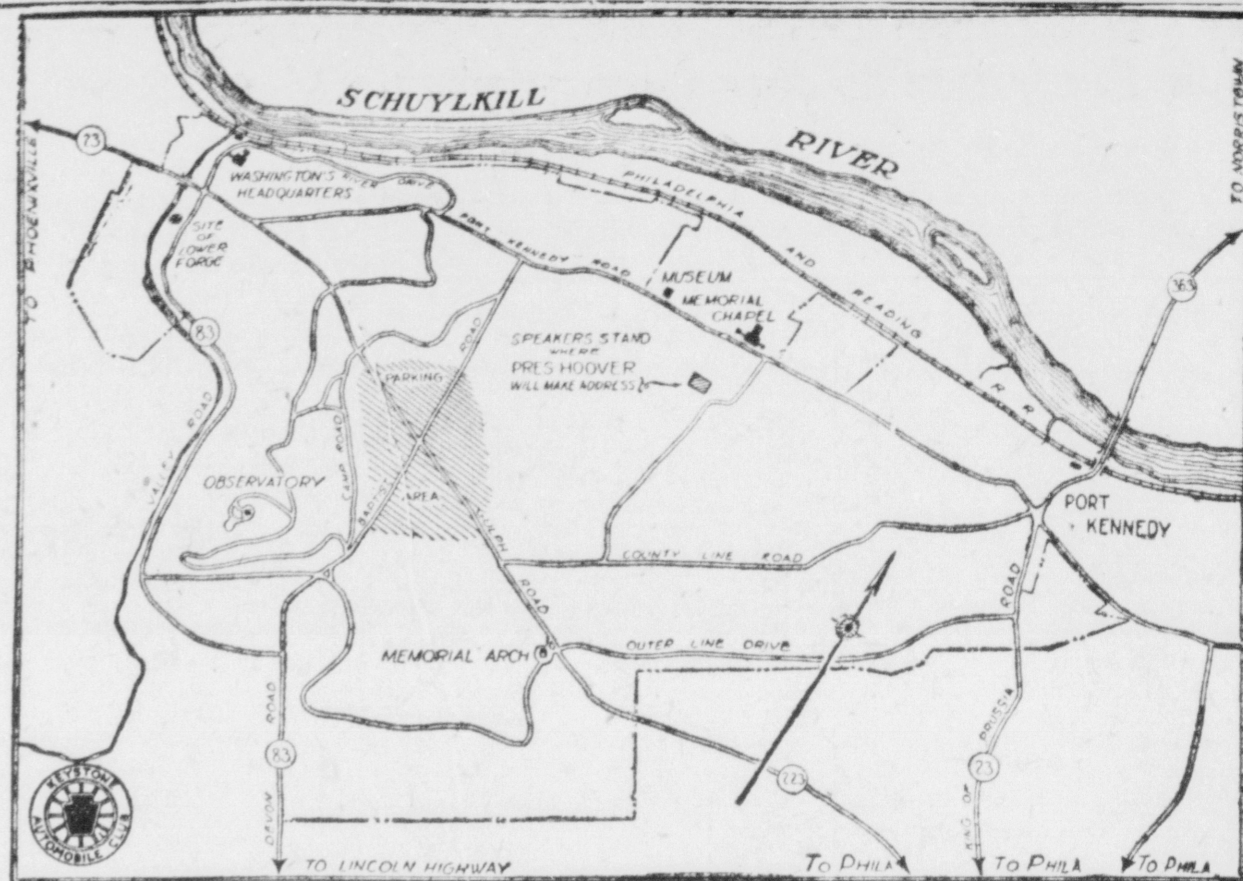

I wonder what would happen if the mother in the eagle's nest would force her brood to gaze with unhooded eyes straight into the glare of the great Eye of Day.

Too much talk, too much emphasis, too much "smart" discussion.

Perhaps we'll learn sometime to keep some phases of life discreetly in the background—at least, when the children are sitting in the room with eyes and ears wide open.

They don't know too little, these victims of our strange age. They know entirely too much.

WASHINGTON, AS FARMER, SUFFERED FROM DROUGHT

Almost Total Loss of Crop Caused First President One Year

IN THE SEASON OF 1788

Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, happened to fall into conversation the other day with a representative of the Division of Information and Publication of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission. The Senator represents the largest agricultural State in the Union, and quite naturally the subject of George Washington as a farmer came to his mind.

"We're all inclined to look on our burdens as the first and worst of their kind," said the Senator. "And no doubt the disastrous drought of last year, that laid a blight over a great section of the country and caused distress and loss, might be set down as one of the outstanding afflictions in our history. But the records show that these cycles of rain deficiency are of fairly regular recurrence. George Washington himself was a sufferer from these periodic failures in what the weather man calls precipitation.

"He took a mighty hard blow," Senator Sheppard reflected. "The other day I came across a letter that Washington wrote from Mount Vernon to a friend of his. The letter was dated April 4, 1788, and it impressed me so that I had it copied. Here it is." The Senator drew from his pocket a type-written sheet. "In this letter Washington discloses that he knew very well what it was to lose nearly the whole of his crops. It's an interesting revelation of the man and his trials. He says, the Senator read:

"Dear Sir: I am very sorry I have not yet been able to discharge my account with the James River Company, for the amount of which you presented me with an order.

"The almost total loss of my crop last year by the drought, which has obliged me to purchase upwards of eight hundred barrels of corn, and my other numerous and necessary demands for cash, when I find it impossible to obtain what is due to me by any means, have caused me more perplexity and given me more uneasiness than I ever experienced before from want of money. In addition of these disappointments which I have met with from those who are indebted to me, I have in my hand a number of indents and other public securities, which I have received from time to time as the interest of some Continental loan-office certificates, which are in my possession. . . ."

"That was in 1788," the Senator continued. "Exactly eleven years later, in 1799, the last year of Washington's life, he suffered again from drought. What he has to say of that experience will interest every farmer of today. I had copied for me this letter that Washington wrote to a friend, dated Aug. 17, 1799." The Senator read it as follows:

"The drought has been so excessive on this estate that I have made no oats—and if it continues a few days longer, I shall make no corn. I have cut little or no grass; and my meadows, at this time, are as bare as the pavements; of consequence no second crop can be expected. These things will compel me, I expect, to reduce the mouths that feed on my hay."

"Doesn't that sound as if written last year?" Senator Sheppard remarked. "That last line in Washington's letter completes the parallel between his experience and the loss of our farmers who were compelled to sell their livestock for lack of the means to feed them.

"So even George Washington, one of the wealthiest men of his time," the Senator reflected, "knew what it was to take a crippling loss at the hands of Nature. And in the first letter I read you," the Senator smiled, "Washington sounds a note that will make him understandable to many a present-day American outside the farming circle. Even the Father of his Country knew what it was to be behind with his bills, and had to put up his own equivalent of a modern hard-luck story to account for his lack of cash. It's just another one of those homely touches," the Senator ended, "that should endear George Washington to every American, and arouse deep interest in the Celebration of his Two Hundredth Birthday which will extend from February 22, until Thanksgiving of next year.

Mrs. Alvin Leech and daughter, Miss Harriet Leech, of Wood street, spent Wednesday visiting Mrs. Leech's grandchildren, Anna May and Elaine Leach, of Riverside, N. J.

Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE: Reading your column I saw a letter signed by "Brown Eyes." Her case is the very same as mine, and I would like to know if it is the same girl. Will you help me? H. H.

H. H.—The letter to which you refer was signed with the nom de plume "Brown Eyes." Sorry not to be able to help you.

DEAR NANCY LEE: What would you do or say to a fellow who disappointed you when you were the hostess at a party and he did not let you know that he was not coming? He has had several chances to explain, but has not. BLUE EYES.

BLUE EYES: I would do as every sensible girl would do under the circumstances. I would totally ignore such a loathsome person. Even if apologies should be forthcoming, which I doubt, please don't be influenced by them.

DEAR NANCY LEE: I am 16 years. Recently my boy-friend and I had a quarrel and although I apologized for what I did in a letter, it ended our friendship. Yesterday I received a letter from a boy whom my boy-friend had introduced me to, saying he had obtained permission from my boy-friend to write to me and asking me to continue the correspondence. I am half afraid to reply to this letter for fear that it was not written by this boy. Please tell me what to do. P. A. T.

P. A. T.: If you have any doubt about the authenticity of the letter, do not reply to it.

Tuned For Five Miles A Minute

FIVE miles a minute is the goal of Norman (Wizard) Smith, Australian holder of 51 speed records, when he attempts this month to break the present world's motor record of 245 miles an hour now held by Sir Malcolm Campbell, English racing driver. A 90-mile beach at Kaitia, New Zealand, has been selected for the trial.

The unique machine pictured above, is powered with the "Hush Hush" Napier engine loaned by the British government. It is understood to develop twice the power of Sir Henry Segrave's 1,000 horsepower, Golden Arrow, with which he exceeded 230 miles an hour at Daytona Beach, Fla.

"Wizard" Smith, as in previous record attempts, has availed himself of American assistance. Automotive engineers and oil technologists of the Vacuum Oil Company, Pty. Ltd., Australia, have been consulted in solving fuel problems. Superchargers of airplane design will pump air and fuel into the cylinders utilizing gas developed by Mobilgas engineers.

The only possible American competition to challenge the present British supremacy is the 48-cylinder, 4,800 horsepower machine under construction in California by Peter de Paolo and Harlan Fengler, noted drivers, but this will not be finished according to reports in time to race this year.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a Junior in high school and I've been "sneaking" out with him for several months. My folks objected to him at first because he has gone steady with a girl who is now away at school. The other day it was decided that I could go with him. But now he pays most of his attention to my girl friend who was brought up with me and stays at our house. He used to like me the best but my friend persuaded him her way.

LONESOME: No doubt, now that there is no more need for subterfuge and intrigue, the affair has lost most of its attraction for the young man. After all, he is only treating you as he treated his other girl friend and his conduct didn't seem so reprehensible then, did it? So now there is really little you can do except to take your medicine with a grin and make it do you good. As to the boy, surely in your heart of hearts, you must know that he isn't worth bothering about.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am sick in this hospital, but I look forward to your column. Perhaps you could help me. I am in love with a traveling salesman and whenever I mention that to my friends they look at each other and laugh—please, is it true, that traveling men are not faithful.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl in my teens. Do members of the opposite sex prefer tall girls? I am only five feet and my girl friend is five feet four, but she is the one who gets all the dates. She is not better looking. Why is it she gets them all and I get none?

VIVIAN: By no means. Some of the most admired of women and famous beauties, too, have been quite short. Many men prefer the petite type. There are many quite tiny screen stars who are popular because of not despite their stature. See to it that you keep your little figure perfect and don't put on weight.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl, 16, and very conscious when I am with a boy friend in a crowd. I am afraid to talk and cannot have a good time with the rest. What would you advise me to do?

BOOTS: You are at rather a self-conscious age. Don't let it worry you. While there is no need to "cut-up" and be boisterous, there is no reason why an intelligent girl should not be able to converse intelligently and pleasantly with her companions. If you have sufficient interest in any topic, that interest will carry you away and quite overcome your shyness.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl 13 and would like to ask you a few questions: (1) Which would be the nicest time for a party, evening or late afternoon? (2) What would I serve as luncheon? (3) Where should I serve their luncheon, at the table or on their laps?

POM POM: An evening affair is always much more cheery than one held in the afternoon. Afternoon parties are usually bridge parties or formal teas. A buffet supper at night is very informal and delightful. Sandwiches of all kinds, some nice salads, jellies, fruits, cake, cool drinks, coffee and tea can easily be prepared in advance and arranged on a table with stacks of plates, cutlery, serviettes, etc. Many people use paper mache plates at these informal affairs. Of course, if you are entertaining only a small group, why then you could serve them at the table. But for a large number of guests, the buffet system is the best.

Make Your DREAMS For A Gold Prize Come True

Spurred by the ever-present necessity of making time count when it counts most, and determined to brush aside every obstacle that may arise between them and a life-long ambition, candidates in The Courier's big $10,000 gold campaign are approaching the call of time with feverish activity. Only four short days remain until the last big vote period is closed for ever. Bright and early every morning, candidates and friends of candidates are going to begin scouring every possible source for subscriptions and second payments on the subscription that will bring votes and happiness. And many of them have stated that there will be no let-up till the closing hour of the third period—10 o'clock next Monday night. All subscriptions and renewals received during this week will, of course, apply on the last BIG VOTE schedule now in effect and thus enable the candidates receiving them to increase their vote totals to large numbers—placing them nearer and nearer the point which they are striving to attain—one of the big bags of gold. The announcement of the last offer for big votes, which is now in effect, may be likened unto a burning brand applied to a brush heap, in the manner it is spreading enthusiasm among candidates. Speculation is rife as to who the big prize winners will be, but no one can tell and the information cannot be known until official judges have completed their task of checking up the votes at the close of the campaign. It is real energetic effort and never-ceasing determination that tells in the end. Every candidate has a chance to win one of the biggest prizes, and the more work he or she does, the more certain will they be of winning. This week, this fateful third period, is filled with tremendous possibilities; time enough for anyone to make a victory a certainty. Get started early each morning, keep going and finish the biggest, yet shortest campaign ever inaugurated in this vicinity with a finish that will do justice and make you prosperous and happy.

Conklin's Sport Sparks

By LES CONKLIN

International News Service Sports Writer
NEW YORK, May 28.—You might say that Tommy Loughran's father is his best friend and severest critic.

Loughran, Sr., wouldn't admit that his boy was a good fighter until he saw Tommy get off the floor and come on to win.

"My father never got excited about my boxing until he saw me survive a knockdown one night in Philadelphia," Loughran told the writer recently.

"It was back in 1922 and Jimmy Darcy, as I recall, was my opponent. Darcy spilled me but I came back and won the decision."

"That night my father admitted he thought I might become a good fighter. It was the first time he had really praised me, although I had been fighting two and a half years and had won something like forty-five fights."

Loughran today is the most popular fighter appearing at Madison Square Garden. Whenever the dapper Philadelphian enters the arena, the rafters ring with applause, the demonstration usually lasting three or four minutes.

Accustomed as he is to the plaudits of the multitude, Loughran thrills anew to the cheers every time he hears them, and goes into battle with his eyes shining. On his last appearance at the Garden, the applause was so deafening that Tommy actually blushed.

The writer discovered a new type of fight fan recently in Hartford, Conn., home of "Bat" Battalino. The Italian was winding up training for his titular bout with Fidel LaBarba, another son of sunny Italy, and the whole city was agog over the affair. Two buxom Italian women of middle age, accompanied by half a dozen children, boarded a bus and immediately began discussing the fight in their native tongue.

Knowing nothing of the language beyond "un bichiere di vino," the writer was unable to interpret the discussion, but it dealt with the impending battle. It was Battalino this, and LaBarba that, accompanied by violent gesticulations.

While the six children licked lollipops and annoyed the other passengers in the bus to their hearts' content, the two mothers fought the entire fifteen rounds in advance before reaching their little farmhouse, nestling alongside a little river in a secluded valley and surrounded by century-old stone fences.

It was something new in the line of fight addicts.

HARRIMAN FIELD CLUB CONTINUES ITS WINS

Defeat Hibernians, Making It Three Consecutive Victories

NOW LEAD THE LEAGUE

By T. M. Juno

Four runs in the fourth inning enabled the Harriman Field Club to continue their winning streak in the Bristol Twilight League. Their run of victories now stands at three straight and last night's victims were the Hibernians who bowed to them by the score of 7-2.

Previous to the fourth frame, the fray was a hurling duel between Kohler, of the Sixth Warders and Lawler, of the "Hibboes." But suddenly Lawler blew up and a quartet of Harrimah runs dented the pentagon. Sullivan was sent in and pitched good relief ball until the last frame when three hits counted two more runs for the winning club.

By virtue of their victory the Harriman Club still maintains a half game lead on first place. The Independents who are the trailers meet this team tonight and a victory will put the "Indies" in the first place position in the league.

"Smoke" Joe Kohler tossed them up for the winners and was hit freely. However, he tightened up in the pinches and several attempted rally by the Hibernians went to naught. Kohler's teammates also came through with wonderful support, having three double-plays to their credit and each coming in the midst of a Hibernian rally.

"Larry" David, "Ches" Carp, Joe Kohler, of the Harriman team, and "Jimmy" Leyden, of the A. O. H. team led the hitters with two hits each. "Jimmy" Cooper was passed three times in the four times he stepped to the plate.

The Harriman team scored a run in the first. Cooper walked and stole second; David fouled out to Brady; Morrell fanned; Carp singled to left, counting Cooper; Carp went out stealing; Brady to Rodgers.

The Hibernians tied the score in the second. McGinley doubled to left; McClafferty fanned; Ennis rolled out to short; McGinley went to third on a passed ball; Rodgers walked; Lawler scored McGinley with a single to center; Thompson tapped to Kohler and went out at first.

Four runs in the fourth spelled victory for the Harriman team. McDevitt singled to left; Dougherty bunted along the first base line and was tagged out by Leyden; Wilkinson doubled to left, counting McDevitt; Kohler singled to center, scoring Wilkinson; Cooper was passed; David hit to center and Kohler recounted; Lawler tried to catch Cooper napping and threw into centerfield, Cooper scoring; Sullivan went in to pitch for the "Hibboes." Morrell was passed; Carp struck out; Brady fled to right.

The "Hibs" also counted a run in their turn. Thompson was safe on Dougherty's boot of his roller; Brady was safe at first when David threw wild to first after stopping his grounder; Leyden scored Thompson with a single to left; Dugan fanned; McGinley lined to Carp who threw to McDevitt doubling Leyden off second.

In their last turn with the stick, Harriman counted twice. Kohler led off with a double; Cooper was called out on strikes; David doubled to center, scoring Kohler; Morrell fled out to second; Carp singled to center and David counted; Brady fled to Mulligan.

"RICK" FERRELL MAKING GOOD, AS ONE MORE OF FAMED FERRELLS

By EUGENE J. ROGUSKI

International News Service Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS, May 28.—Another member of the Ferrell family has made good in the major leagues.

The latest contribution of Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell to the big leagues is Richard ("Rick") Ferrell, first-string catcher of the St. Louis Browns.

Like his brother, Wesley Ferrell, ace of the Cleveland Indians pitching staff and considered one of the best hurlers in baseball today, "Rick" is one of the stars of the Browns' team.

"Rick" signed with the Browns several years ago for $25,000, after being declared a free agent by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball. In addition, the contract called for a salary of $11,000, which is quite a sum as Brownie contracts go.

Ferrell, after the close of the 1929 season, batted .229. Now, however, "Rick" is proving he was a good investment and is starting to pay dividends. This season he is in the midst of a great batting streak, being among the "Big Five" in the fence-busting list.

Besides, this, he is characterized by Manager Bill Killifer of the Browns as a "One-man Catching Staff." Although he is not very big or heavy, Ferrell possesses an iron arm, one that throws the ball to catch a base-runner stealing with terrific speed and uncanny accuracy.

Manager Killifer believes he has another Ray Schalk in Ferrell. Killifer ought to know, as he himself was a pretty good receiver in his day.

Thus, Ferrell has proven he wasn't a gamble when the Browns signed him.

"Rick" besides Wesley, has two other brothers who are pointing to entering the major leagues in the near future. They are Marvin and George Ferrell, both pitchers.

Marvin was brought to the Browns' training camp this spring by "Rick." He was later farmed out by the Browns to Milwaukee. George is the property of the St. Louis Cardinals, pitching for Greensboro, N. C.

East's Track Hopes

By HARDIN BURNLEY

INTERCOLLEGIATE athletic supremacy in the United States will be decided tomorrow and the next day at the annual I. C. 4-A games to be held this year at Philadelphia, home of the University of Pennsylvania. And it is the team from old Penn upon which the East pins its hopes of winning first place, usually captured by the Far West in recent years. Again Southern California will be represented by a great team, which is favored to repeat its decisive 1930 triumph.

Penn, featuring Carl Coan, its mile wonder, and Barney Berlinger, decathlon specialist looms now as the best of the East's track outfits, with Yale a close second. Harvard and Cornell seem to be in a rather distinctly secondary class. The Eastern collegians have bright chances of capturing most of the middle distance events, but the weight-throwing, sprints and a good share of the jumping honors look as though they will be won by the Far Western athletes.

However, certain of the Middle West stars may cut deeply into Southern California's score this year. If Jack Keller of Ohio State is in excellent form, he ought to win the high hurdles despite first class competition, and Lee Sentman of Illinois should prove a close second. Keller clipped a tenth of a second off the world's record of 14.4 for the 120 high hurdles recently, but his 14.3 will not be official because he knocked over two hurdles on that momentous occasion. Unofficially, when running as anchor in a shuttle relay, Keller was timed in 13.9 over that 120 timber-decked stretch!

If Ad Kelly, Georgetown flash, is in form, he may cut into the score of the Western teams in the sprints. Russell Chapman of Bates in the half-mile and one or two others are likely to win certain events for their schools. If they can reduce Far Western (Southern California and Stanford) scores, and Penn maintains its great indoor form, the Red and Blue team might win the national title.
